Topics:
The goal of the second phrase of this course is to cover a number of topics in industrial organization that falls under the broad areas of information economics, price dispersion and search. The two texts given above are for general references. This course will focus on detailed discussions of some important papers on these topics. A tentative list of readings is given below, and more may be added depending on the progress of the course.

Students with Disabilities
The American with Disabilities Act (ADA) is a federal anti-discrimination statute that provides comprehensive civil rights protection for persons with disabilities. Among other things, this legislation requires that all students with disabilities, be guaranteed a learning environment that provides for reasonable accommodation of their disabilities. Texas A&M University has a strong institutional commitment to the principle of diversity in all areas. In that spirit, admission to Texas A&M University and any of its sponsored programs is open to all qualified individuals without regard to subgroup, class, or stereotype. If you believe you have a disability requiring an accommodation, please contact the Department of Disability Services in Room B118 of the Cain Hall Building. The phone number 845-1637. ADA accommodation will be made in accordance with the law.

Aggie Honor System
Aggie Honor Code: “An Aggie does not lie, cheat, or steal or tolerate those who do.” Upon accepting admission to Texas A&M University, a student immediately assumes a commitment to uphold the honor Code, to accept responsibility for learning, and to follow the philosophy and rules of the Honor System (see www.tamu.edu/aggiehonor). Students will be required to state their commitment on examinations, research papers, and other academic work. Ignorance of the rules does not exclude any member of the Texas A&M community from the requirements or the processes of the Honor System.
